

Testicular Cancer Network

The Testicular Cancer Network is a consortium of testicular cancer awareness, support & research charities working together to save lives across the UK.

Our vision is to ensure that everyone has the best chance of surviving testicular cancer.

Our members are comprised of eight small charities who work collaboratively together to ensure all charities are providing the same information and access to resources to those who need it, wherever they may be in the UK.

Our ethos of collaboration and community allows us to give a louder and stronger voice to champion the testicular cancer community – leading in patient advocacy, education and awareness, leading support programmes and funding life-saving research.

Working alongside the National Germ Cell Group, our members share the latest medical statistics, facts and figures and risk factors; ensuring a consistent awareness message is delivered to our respective communities and audiences.

All member charities are registered with their respective charity commission and are held accountable by our membership criteria; which includes offering services to our beneficiaries, having a focus on testicular cancer, and sharing best practise, knowledge, and opportunities with fellow members.

Together we champion April as Testicular Cancer Awareness Month. We share educational resources as a network to reach a nationwide audience, and helping to raise awareness, reduce embarrassment and save lives.
